things. Let's look at some factors that, I think, affected our preferences the most.

To begin with, ~~tourists~~ now is widespread. Millions of people from developed countries leave their towns for some new experience. Fifty years ago less than a half of them crossed the board. People now take it for granted. They think that there is nothing in this world that may surprise them. "I've seen it all"; my father usually says, and we stay by the pool <sup>icc</sup> instead of going places.

Secondly, most people now find excursions exhausting. Leaving the hotel requires walking. We usually go places on vacation and ~~what~~ the only thing we are going for is rest. Do we consider walking ~~is~~ rest? I don't think so. Taking sunbaths, swimming and sleeping, that's what modern people think of relaxation. My mom always says that she ~~had done~~ <sup>does</sup> enough walking back home, so she is not a fan of <sup>an</sup> active vacation. I think, people in 1960s and '70s were more active. They went overseas to see the <sup>icc</sup> sightseeing, explore new places. People back then weren't that tired of life, I guess.

I think

From my point of view, ~~you~~ going abroad only worth it if you are not staying at the hotel. So if you get a chance to see this beautiful world, use it.
