For what do we use education? For finding our advantages in some kind of life sphere, for solving difficult problems, etc. Or we use it to become better than one day ago?

In my opinion, this quotation is total truth. Each of us have ever done any ignorant thing like bad behaviour or something like that but actually ignorance doesn't exist only in our daily routine. It has its own place in educational sphere: when anybody starts an argument with no reasons only because of some "white blanks" in his/her mind. Usually it happens because of not involving in discovering ourselfs and increasing a level of our knowledges.

The first reason of starting this discovery is finding something new and interesting during educational prosse process: new language or inspiring theory. The second one is sharing your opinions to find that "white blanks" in your mind with other people. It helps in solving problems and becoming less ignorant.

In the end of this monologue discussion I want to say that it is really important to be as less ignorant as you can in any theme or discussion and education is the first helper one that could help us in it.
