In my opinion, there should not be any changes, except the terms between September and May. I suggest to change the length of terms to make studying easier for learning. Students should not be too busy and too free at the same time. I consider that it is better for learning.

Also students should mix leisure activities with studying on holidays as it will help them not to forget knowledge they got at school.

If summer holidays are too long, firstly, students will not be able to continue studying at the same level they <sup>(ex)</sup>ended <sup>finished</sup> previous year, because they will have a sense of the endless holidays and put away repeating school material, what can affect on the grades of students, secondly, the school material will be given more that it can be learnt by students.

To sum it up, I think that it is better to have no changes in the length of summer or term, because the modern school system is made as it should be.
